SOME NOTES TO GUIDE THINGS ALONG

The sibling relationship is a unique one, for it is "one of the longest relationships in people's lives" (Mikkelsen, Floyd, & Pauley, 2011, p. 220). The relationship is characterized by direct, often daily, contact and mutual knowledge of each other's lives (Teven, Martin, & Neupauer, 1998; Floyd, 1996). This contact leads to continued interaction throughout their lifetimes, as well as a deep influence on each other's lives (Mikkelsen, Floyd, & Pauley, 2011; Avtgis, 2003). Siblings have the potential to be a source of social support in times of need.
